LEAVE TRAPS AND TRAPPED ANIMALS ALONE

Hunters and others may encounter a legally set trap, and possibly wildlife caught in a trap. It is illegal to disturb traps, remove wildlife caught in them, or kill any wildlife in a trap. Violators can be punished under state law.

If you are concerned about a trap or captured animal you encountered, contact a regional Fish and Game office.

People hunting with dogs, or people walking pets off leash in areas where trapping may occur, should become familiar with how to safely remove a pet from a trap. For guidance on how to release a pet from a trap go to idfg.idaho.gov/media/release-pet

Regulated trapping is an important management tool and a legal activity in Idaho. Trapping provides many benefits to Idahoans by reducing wildlife damage to crops and property, mediating threats to human health and safety, and trapping is also used to monitor many species of furbearing mammals.
